

TO TAKE EFFECT AUGUST 1, 2009

The Technical Amendments Act of 1997 authorized the Register of Copyrights to increase fees based on a study of the cost of providing services to the public. For the current fee adjustments, the Register submitted a cost study to Congress on March 15, 2009. Because most costs have gone up, most fees have been scheduled to rise. However, efficiencies resulting from increased automation of Copyright Office services permitted some fees to remain the same or even decrease. Adoption of the proposed new fees will allow the Office to recover a significant part of the costs to the Office of registering claims and providing other copyright-related services to the public.
